

MAGAZINE Santa Barbara

Double Our Annual Issue Home + Garden Take

Costume designer, stylist, and now vintner Paula Tabalipa at her Santa Ynez hilltop abode.

OJAI ~ MONTECITO ~ SANTA YNEZ ~ ONES TO WATCH, AND MORE

GETAWAY

The Grand Premier suite.

Emerald walls and velvet cushions in the lounge.

Ready for a Close-Up

Hollywood might be dotted with shiny, towering contemporary hotels and sprawling bungalow hide-aways, but few properties shimmer with the kind of effortless old Hollywood glamor that the 24-room PROSPECT HOLLYWOOD possesses. Restored by designer Martyn Lawrence Bullard, in collaboration with the Hollywood Heritage Historic Society and the PRG Hospitality Group, the 1939 property reopened its doors in early 2020 as an ode to the Golden Age of Hollywood. Located in Whitley Heights, the building was nestled in the neighborhood where silver-screen stars like Jean Harlow, Marlene Dietrich, and James Dean once lived.

Custom black-and-white marble floors, golden palm-tree wallpaper, velvet banquettes, vintage Hollywood artwork, and a claw-foot tub or two round out this boutique property's lavish style, while Bullard's bold, brilliant design brings all the disparate elements together in a charming medley of old and new. A lobby lounge and central courtyard with a garden featuring a lion's-head fountain provide warm, bright spaces for guests to mix and mingle in the Hollywood glow, while the ghosts of film stars past look on approvingly. Rooms from $299. 1850 N. Cherokee Ave., Hollywood, 310-299-5222, THEPROSPECTHOLLYWOOD.COM. c.w.

The full-service cocktail bar.

PHOTOGRAPHS: JAIME KOWAL

The exterior of the historic 1939 building. RIGHT: Golden palm trees and jewel-toned décor add Hollywood glam and whimsy.